

For our in-class collaborations, we will organize ourselves in small groups of 5 students. Each student will bring the required materials to class, and we will spend the second half of class going over each other's work, probing the materials, questioning the producer(s), and offering constructive feedback. Each student will take notes on their peers' feedback, and following these in-class collaborations, will integrate the comments and concerns into subsequent consideration and revision of the materials.